

Physical Access Control

Today's world is tougher than yesterdays.

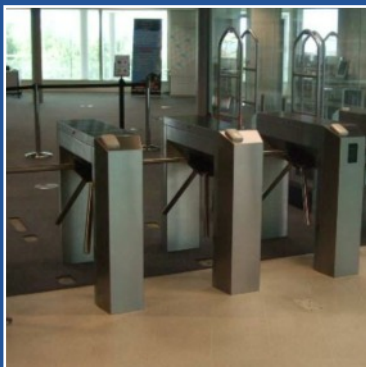

Terrorism, vandalism, break-ins, espionage and even parking control are an important fact within our lives.

Willings can help people feel secure without restricting their freedom of movement, whether it involves entering a company reception, industrial area, tube station, stadium, leisure complex, hospital, shopping centre or even an airport.

We realise that our customers require a variety of different products.

To give our customers this choice, Willings have become agents for several leading physical access control manufacturers.

These agencies allow us to offer our customers total turn-key solutions and the choice they need.

Willings can draw on considerable experience from within and from all our suppliers in order to advise our customers on the products best suited for their particular applications.

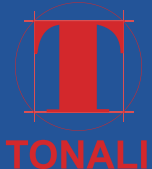

Much of our success has been the flexibility in offering the best overall complement of equipment and our high level of design and management skills.

Our skilled and dedicated workforce has an innovative approach to problem solving and the enthusiasm to find the best technical solution for each application.

Significantly, many companies have placed repeat orders with us, reflecting a high degree of confidence in our expertise.
